
What's a Good Deal on Dairy In the Trans-Pacific Partnership Negotiations?

A Balanced Deal

A good deal on dairy trade expands U.S. access to the Japanese and Canadian markets so that additional exports balance any new U.S. import access that might be granted to New Zealand ...

... a bad deal favors New Zealand, Canadian and Japanese dairy farmers over our farmers ... it limits U.S. access to the Japanese and Canadian markets while opening our markets even more to New Zealand, the world's largest dairy exporter.

An Unbalanced Deal

TPP should be a good deal for America
And a balanced deal for U.S. dairy farmers!
